

Mondello Park Car Track Day Training

Posted by slipsliderg - 2011/01/12 23:32

Just spotted this on octane if anybody is interested, I have emailed them and am waiting for a response, well worth the money in my opinion and would be a great starter for those that want to get into trackdays.

New Mondello Park Scheme to make Track Driving more Accessible

Car Track Days are one of Ireland's best kept motoring secrets. A relatively small number of Ireland's high performance and modified car drivers seem to be aware of the opportunities that exist at Mondello Park to enjoy driving their cars beyond the limits imposed on the public roads. Even for those that are aware of Car Track days the idea of driving quickly on a circuit can look a little intimidating, but a new service being provided by Mondello Park aims to make track driving more accessible by educating drivers about track day driving and help them overcome their fears of the track.

Starting on January 29th Mondello Park's Car Track Day Training days will provide drivers with a low cost opportunity to sample a car track day, without having to take to the track with more experienced drivers. Newcomers will be given classroom instruction regarding pre track day preparation, track behaviour, what to expect, how to get the best from a track day and the differences between road and track driving. Classrooms sessions will be followed by practical on-track instruction driving their own cars and the day will be completed by a twenty minute open track day session where they can put their new skills and knowledge to the test in a controlled and supervised environment.

The Track Day Training days are priced extremely cheaply as their primary purpose is to encourage more drivers to take part in track days at Mondello Park. The course takes three hours to complete and morning and afternoon session will be available with both priced at €50.00 per driver. Prospective participants need to be at least eighteen years of age with a full driving license and must have their own car. For normal track days each driver is required to provide their own crash helmet but due to the introductory nature of the training days, Mondello Park will provide these free of charge for the day. Unlike a full Car Track Day passengers are not allowed and race cars of any type will not be permitted.

Drivers interested in learning more about car track days can find full details of what is involved on the Mondello Park web site or by calling the Mondello Park office prior to booking in for their introductory session. To book a place on the January 29th day drivers should call 045-860200 or email info@mondellopark.ie.

Car Track Day Training

Okay, I shot them a mail asking for dates around end of March. It might sound far away but I guarantee you, if you have a "few" jobs to do, the end of March will fly in. I have to say - having a date/goal really is great motivation to get those jobs/mods done !

I'll get their initial reply and see if we have a chance of getting an MR2.ie only session.

Just in advance of Mondello getting back to me, lets throw out a date and check interest :

As said already, 50 euros is amazing value ! :)

Spidey, that date of the 29th is from Mondello and this is not a track day, its a trackday training day. With some instruction to show people what the trackdays are all about.

The price for a track day itself is alot more expensive than €50-00. You probably know all this already, sorry. I doubt MR2.ie would be able to get an exclusive half day for training considering the average turn out for runs etc.

Yeah, I knew it was just the track training day but for me who has never had an MR2 on a track, this is an invaluable intro.

I know what you mean about the numbers but hopefully we can muster up at least 5 :)

@B4Dark - I hadn't really picked the end of March for any reason except to give people time to prep their cars.

Speaking of which, have to srt brakes and maybe source a rear TRD strut brace :)

70 minutes track time, it more the instruction I am going for, you can never learn enough and at €50-00 its very reasonable.

This sounds pretty awesome, I'd love to get a good try at top speed in my 2 though i doubt they've a straight quite long enough for that I wouldn't mind going myself at that price, my only concern is insurance, I don't imagine my road insurance would cover me in a track day and I don't see mondello fronting the money, or am I wrong?

I hate being a worrier sometimes! lol I'm booked in for a home straight course with them in march in their cars though so I've that to look forward to as well :D

Re:Mondello Park Car Track Day Training

Posted by slipsliderg - 2011/01/30 23:21

What a day, enjoyable from every angle even sideways :laugh:, great to meet up with the lads so early in the year and the cars looked smashing parked, let alone going around the track.

The day ran in the format below, and despite what people may think it was very informative. I will admit though the mind can wander and wonder when the funk do we get some track time. Probably more to do with adrenaline than anything else.

We did, I would say about 6 laps in the first session (in our cars and radios to a lead driver). First lap out, stopping at one of the corners where we were given a walk thru of the corner, Then proceeded to do some laps with the pace increasing as we went on.

Then in for a break and some more info and a video of a poor MR2 tubby T-Bar on fire in the pit lane :(

Out again following a lead driver, probably six more laps again with the pace increasing. Back into the pit lane then and we were told to get the helmets. We were being presented the track as a live session would be on any given track day. Although the instructors did drive around keeping an eye on things as they went on.

Back in after the live session (20 minutes) for a debrief and chat about how we felt the course went. Very positive feedback was given and I am sure if anything the course can only improve.

Now notes to myself,

1. Goodyear efficient grips on the front, do what they say on the tin (save you fuel! although I was surprised at the grip level)
2. Hankook Ventus (ditch finders by rep) on the rear, they did ok as well, broke away a good few times but told you they were going to.
3. Eibach progressive springs and B6 yellow billies, excellent.
4. Fixed front and rear control arms, bloody great for driver feel.
5. Braided brake hoses, didn't really notice anything above OEM
6. Halfords Dot 4 brake fluid, did well for what it is, no fade. Although if I was upgrading pads I think I would go for a branded version.
7. SW20, N/A excellent, really impressed by the cars performance today.

Was talking to a mate of mine afterwards and he mentioned that on the Subaru owners club they ask what speed you got up to at trackdays.

His reply is the same as mine "if you know that, is was not fast enough" all i can say is that I needed forth twice on each lap with a 7200 red line :woohoo: :woohoo:

Bloody great day, made all the better with great company chers guys KC's coming to you all.

yep it was a great day and was well run, good to have so many mr2's out as well, they had markers on the track for braking points, turn in and apex points and these were invaluable. The track can be a bit misleading and can look the same and you can get lost but there wasn't much hassle.

I found the instructors advice was good and they wanted us to go as fast as possible.

great to see everybody and would definitely recommend it to anyone

Spidey i think it was fully booked, 20 in the morning session, 19 in the evening,

Re:Mondello Park Car Track Day Training

Posted by b4ss - 2011/01/31 14:55

I had a ball myself, here are my comments:

If you are going to do one, it really helps to know the track, as you can build up your pace and confidence quicker. If you want to learn mondello it is available in

GTR Evo - <http://www.gtr-evolution.com/> - 20 Euro

Mondello track - <http://www.nogripracing.com/details.php?filenr=6089>

rFactor - <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bzbMYvug13s>

It is also in TOCA Race Driver 3 and Need For Speed: Pro Street(apparently).

If it is your first time out in Mondello, you can happily cruise around in 3rd while you get to know the track and the lines initially...

For me the biggest part of it, was how quick an MR2 can stop once warmed up :)

All in all great day out, and great to see good few MR2s down there :)

Out of interest, what was the timing system like?

Were they able to show top speed, track times etc etc?

Who saw what speed down the main straight? I presume Ray was on the speed limiter :)

Re:Mondello Park Car Track Day Training

Posted by slipsliderg - 2011/02/01 09:20

There is no timing equipment used, when I used to race you had a transponder that was linked into the track system and the times could be tracked then. The system needs staff and people to have transponders, so no need to do it for trackdays.

As for top speed, "if you have time to look at the speed your not going fast enough"

I did notch into fourth cresting the hill into tarzan 1, and just under the bridge on the main straight but only in the gear for maybe 1/2 seconds. My car will get to about 92mph in third so I would say I maxed out at about 85 mph if I was to look back at it, couldn't be sure though.

Might not sound like much speed, but to put it into context.

The crest of the hill coming into tarzan 1 is blind :ohmy: when you come over the top all you can see is this double 90 bends & a gravel trap :bye2: , you go for the brakes, the back end of the car comes loose :woohoo: , you counter steer :pinch: , :pray: , let off the brakes :blink: , turn in and all of a sudden you wonder why you took the corner so slow :damn: and then repeat the process for the next corner. :evil:

As Ray says you won't have a second to look at your speedo on hot laps.
i checked mine on cool off lap, 145kph into tarzan 1 and around the same coming into braking zone for corner 1.

here is a video from the morning session, this was behind the instructor (who's talking on the walkie) in the mazda, just to give lads an idea of what was happening. the brake, turn in and apex boards won't be there on a normal track day.
(video from octane.ie 's here from day 1)

Bit of an update from Mondello.

Octane link

due to a lack of weekend dates in the near future we are considering running the next training day on a Monday or a Tuesday. We know from experience that week days are hard to fill and will not schedule this date unless we feel that there is enough interest. If we cannot fill at least one session (twenty drivers) then the day will not run and we will have to wait quite a while before we get another weekend date.

Can anyone interested in doing a Monday or Tuesday please let me know by PM. If we get sufficient interest we will set an exact date and then open it up for booking.

Another one coming up folks, well worth it.

Thanks to everyone who responded. We have sufficient interest to run another day and this has now been set for Monday March 14th just before the Paddy's day track day. Anyone interested in doing this training day or Paddy's day should contact Mondello on 045-860200 or info@mondellopark.ie.

At the moment we are only running an afternoon session so that means that we will only have twenty spaces available.

"Mondello's next Track Day Training Day is scheduled for the afternoon of Friday 29th April and the cost of the course is €50. If you know anyone who might be interested in doing a track day, but is nervous of being too slow or being on track with more experienced drivers, this day offers the perfect introduction where they will gain the knowledge and confidence to take to the circuit on track days. Anyone interested should contact the office at the details below.

To book your space contact info@mondellopark.ie or 045-860200."
