Posted by GazRev1Tubby - 2012/02/20 20:40

Hi everyone, I've recently finished my own mk2 low rise headlight conversion.

I'm happy to say that these will be available for purchase very soon.

They are 6"x4" glass, sealed beam 'Raybrig' style lenses that fit onto my own custom base plates, and utilise the stock adjustment. Only very minor modifications are needed to fit these, and they accept a standard h4 bulb, so they are virtually plug and play !

They are fully adjustable, and are universal beam.

The mounting plates are cut from 4mm sheet aluminium, so you have no worries of them ever rusting ;)

The kit will comprise of:

- 2 x 6"x 4" sealed beam lenses, pre-assembled to the mounting plates
- 2 x aluminium mounting plates, wrapped in black vinyl
- 2 x custom shrouds finished in black gel coat
- 2 x modified lifting arms to set the correct height (I'll need your existing arms to modify)
- 2 x 3rd fixing point brackets
- All fitting hardware

Full fitting instructions with pictures will be provided

5 sets are currently in production, and should be ready in a few of weeks time

The price is £179.99 including UK delivery, and i'm happy to get a quote for you guys in the R.O.I

I'll let the pictures do the talking, i've purposely left the stock drivers side unit in place to show the difference :yes:

Yep, everything mate :yes:

They take around an hour or so to fit, from start to finish. The only thing the end user will have to do, is visit their local m.o.t/n.c.t garage to set the beam height and angle

They're standard h4 fitment matey, so I guess a HID bulb will fit with no problem. Unfortunately, I don't have one here to try - but if I can get one, i'll check for you :)

Just an update guys, the first 5 sets are now spoken for :yes:

2. Spidey - mr2.ie
3. Adzmr2 - mr2oc
4. Msherry21 - imoc
5. Headcase - mr2oc

I've had a couple of minor set backs over the last few days - mainly to do with the moulding company, but have got it sorted out today.

We're looking at about 4 - 5 weeks until they're ready to send, hopefully sooner. Any subsequent orders should turn around much quicker, but it's been a case of getting all the manufacturing processes set up for the initial run

I'll keep everyone updated in due course, and look forward to seeing them in action :)

great looking kit, Gaz :yes: this is one mod I would consider if I wasn't saving my cash the Highland Run, plus, I don't drive at night that often :silly:

For the guys getting the kits in the republic, if the delivery is expensive to your part of the world you can have them delivered to me (UK address) and we can meet up somewhere.

Other option is to have all kits bought by .ie members delivered to one address in the south.

Both option there just let me know and I will PM Gaz my address B)

Sounds good, Spanky - when Gaz gets a quote for delivery to your address and to one single address in the South, we can compare.

I am sure we are going to get more members buying them once they see them.

I mean - i know loads of members love the popups because they are cool. But, i have nebver heard anyone saying they like them because they go up so far ! Who has done a mod to make them go up even more ?? :laugh:

I reckon this mod is how they really should have been from the factory

Cheers buddy, i'll update as soon as I know :)

Thank you for the deposit offer mate, very kind of you - however, i'd like to get the kits completely built up and tested before I take any money at all. I'm hoping it's only going to be a few more weeks tops - i'm just waiting on the shrouds.

I'm eager to get my own fitted too - i've had to remove them for copying them

They're going to be awesome when done, not long now :yes:

Right, just an update..... shouldn't be long now guys :yes:

Visited my fibreglass man yesterday, and the shrouds have been moulded. Hopefully he'll get a few done this week, so there's a chance i'll have some for next weekend :)

I'll just need to test fit them to my own car first, and providing it's all good, they'll be ready to go !!!

This is actually pretty sweet.

If you do get them made en masse and they look good, I'll consider buying a set from the US (provided I get that job first!).

Re: Gaz's low rise lights

Posted by GazRev1Tubby - 2012/03/26 21:27

Right, an update :th:

I've had the shrouds copied, so now they're ready to sell as kits - bar a road test on mine first ;)

The shrouds were supposed to be pre finished in black gel coat, but due to the moulding process - although they are 'pre-finished', they will still need painting :sad: In light of this, i'm reducing the price to £169.99 per set including recorded delivery within the UK - or £199.99 and I will spray the shrouds to match your car (i'll need you to confirm your paint code).

Full fitting instructions will be provided, and basic tools will be needed to fit them. The installation should take around 2 hrs from start to finish.

Here's a few pics of them fitted to mine. I still need to paint my own shrouds and generally tidy them up, but these are the prototypes :D

Will do Rob, i'll get the kits built up this week hopefully, and let you know when they're ready to go :yes:

I'd guess that postage shouldn't be too much more expensive, but i'll confirm when i've got a quote.

They really are a doddle to fit, but I just want to be 100% confident that you won't have any problems :)

I'll send the kit over - with modified arms, but will require you to send me your stock arms once you've fitted the kit :yes:

Universal? Do Irish/UK cars not have to have the flare on the left hand side to illuminate signs and pedestrians?

Is it checked in NCT anyone?

I was just reading the NCT manual there quickly. Kinda confusing diagrams, IMO! But, from what i can make out, the main horizontal requirement is not to project to the right for the oncoming traffic.

Looks like the left isn't a requirement. However, i shot them off a mail to confirm.

Considering this as next on the list, any news from the NCT?

Re: Gaz's low rise lights

Posted by GazRev1Tubby - 2012/04/14 10:03

Hi guys, sorry I haven posted for a while - once again, I've been waiting on parts to arrive !!!

As these are the first production units, I've had to order quite a few parts. With the bulk of the kits being custom, it's taken a bit of time finding suppliers that can make parts for me.

Regarding beam patterns, as long as they don't dip the wrong way, you should be fine. It's just like taking your car to France and blanking off the beam pattern (or vice versa). You might want to check with the nct over there, although I'm pretty sure your laws won't be too dissimilar to ours ?

I also wanted to test the lights properly on my own car, before selling any, and can confirm that the light output is great with osram night breakers. I'd like to fit hid's at some point, but they're not necessary :yes:

I'll be getting the kits built up over the next week or so, and will finally be able to get them to you shortly.

Thanks for your patience guys :yes:

Another week or so suits me - will be just in time for April payday !

When i get into work on Monday, i will post up a reply i got from the NCT. Its a bit confusing but as far as i can make out, its just the vertical dip that is important and the beam can't go onto the right. But, there is no requirement for the beam to go onto the left/path/etc

Not sure who you were asking - if you meant mine, they were straight forward. My Border front bumper was from Replikit. I just needed to dremel/cut the holes where the light bracket/fitting sits into the bumper.

Re: Gaz's low rise lights

Posted by Spidey - 2012/04/16 14:03

The reply i got from the NCT :

"The headlights must be adjusted so that the beam cut off lies between 0.4% to 5.0% from the horizontal line and from 0% to 3% to the right side of the vertical line and 6.0% to the left."

That sounds like to me that it can go 3% max onto RHS and up to 6% to the left.

So, it looks like it SHOULDN'T be a large, say, 15% beam to the left to light up pedestrians, signs etc. 6% is prob enough to light up signs.

I've had a lot of enquiries, but most people have said that they'd prefer to not wait for them to be fabricated after payment. Problem I have is, I can't afford to have a load of sets sitting around.

Most interest has come from the USA and Germany of all places. I might just keep them limited to the owners clubs, which will also help to keep the costs down :yes:

Hi mate, sorry, I've not been logging in much lately, after buying a house last month, most of my attention has been focussed on decorating :blush:

I've also got into the world of supras, and have started making bits for those!

Regarding the mr2 low rise lights, I can still do them, in fact, I have one set already made up - they were on my own car. They are in perfect working condition, and have hid units fitted - although these could easily be replaced with standard h4 bulbs.

I've noticed I have a pm from you bud, so I'll dig the lights out, take some pics, and send them to you :)

Gaz,

Can you contact me regarding your low-rise set up? I'm ready to buy.
You can contact me via email jdsingh at gmail dot com
