no problem cozy,one thing i've learned is not to rush when doing anything with cars !! haha Make sure your happy with fit and finish and if it takes a little while longer to get them on it'll be worth it in the long run, nothing worse than having something on the car your not 100% happy with because every time you look at the car it's the only thing you'll see! (or is that just me! :laugh: )

Ahem, still on the car at the minute, but might weigh it down to much for the track, will give you a shout when they are coming off. Could even throw in a damage repairable border front bumper ;)

Looking good dude.

That lip should finish the kit off nicely.

Agree with slip about the lowering, you should colour code the black bits on your pop ups as well, makes it look much cleaner!

update; well ive spent the weekend fixing up the interior the plastics were badly painted white so i took them out and now they are a very glossy gun metal grey ive changed the bulbs behind the clocks to blue but not happy with them so gonna leave the petrol gauge and temperature gauge blue and have the rev counter and speedometer cool white hopefully it will look class here is some pics of my progress so far.

FOR SOME REASON THE CENTER ISNT LIGHTING UP IT MUST BE THE LEDS THE ONLY SHINE STRAIGHT I NEED LEDS THET SHINE ALL AROUND :)

right i havent touched the car in a month i still havent sourced an engine well for good money anyways, but will im waiting around i want your opinions on what i should do for the engine bay.

i want to make the engine look cool and flashy i was thinking a dark candy purple engine bay not sure what color ill paint the engine yet id do my callipers aswell to tie it all in together what ye think any other color suggestions? :)

I would say a light colour like white or yellow ... if you get an oil leak you will find it quicker

Great job on the spraying they have a lovely deep dish. Would you consider a nice glossy black might be nice against the chrome and white. Kcd B) Yea I know what your saying different trends in different areas you can get sick of looking at something after a while. The gold does look well just I know a guy with the black wheels on white car and thought they looked great. It would be dull and boring if we all liked the same thing. Car is looking great best of luck with your engine search. :)

What colour is that gold you used Cozy?

Did you use a gun or just a rattle can?
