

Replacement window bits after an attempted theft?

Posted by cathalferris - 2013/04/17 15:20

Came out this morning to see the passenger window looking a bit askew in the frame, and a 2 inch gap at the top of the window leaving in all of the night's weather.

Some scrote managed to shove the window down in to the door and has damaged either the runners or the regulator.

I was awake when the alarm went off ~4am and looked out but didn't see anything, looks likely that they moved on to another car once they were disturbed.

My neighbour's kaput Merc 190e was broken into and pushed around the corner, the dash was ripped out and a hotwire was attempted, not realising that there was no battery in the car, and it wouldn't start anyway.

Where would the best place be to get replacement parts for my 2, now that Joe's gone to the garage in the sky?

=====

Re: Replacement window bits after an attempted theft?

Posted by st182r - 2013/04/17 18:17

i should have a few bits for ya. :(

Re: Replacement window bits after an attempted theft?

Posted by Infamous - 2013/04/17 19:26

That's sickening Cathal, though on the upside at least they never got away with your car!
Hopefully you get sorted with parts!
KC+1 for some luck.

Re: Replacement window bits after an attempted theft?

Posted by cathalferris - 2013/04/18 10:53

Cheers guys.

I'll get in contact once I disassemble the passenger door to see the level of damage and to see what's required. Provisionally it'll be a regulator at least.

It's another thing to learn about with the car ;) how the windows work in this one.

I'll have to take a look at making it more obvious with security in this car, it's already alarmed and immobilised, I suppose it's time to put a large visual deterrent into it as well.

=====

Re: Replacement window bits after an attempted theft?

Posted by julio - 2013/04/19 15:32

You can buy a dud led flashing lite that hooks onto a 12v with a built in relay and could be used in conjunction with your alarm , and for your window its prob just the cog on the regalator or hpefully not the sissor mech , had a link for the dud led ligh but cant upload it with da fone :(

=====