

mr2 mk2 conversion or just buy tubby

Posted by julio - 2014/06/14 22:59

open to ideas nct is due end of month so after that im ether selling my n/a for a tubby or keeping it for a conversion the only thing putting me of the conversion is the time and labour .

with a 10 week old baby and being a painter this time of year is just crazy (which I cant complain) B) any way what price and how long has it taken previous ppl to do it ?

=====

Re: mr2 mk2 conversion or just buy tubby

Posted by spla300 - 2014/06/14 23:30

I recommend a conversion but probably since i done it before and because its a lot cheaper.

I got my crashed tubby on donedeal with a tonne of goodies for 700E

It takes about 2 full days to do an engine swap if you know what youre doing and about a week if you dont, minimum requirements are basic tools, sockets, spanners, engine crane and the help you get from everyone here, you will be grand.

If you dont have a car lift i recommend pallets, thats what i use.

=====

Re: mr2 mk2 conversion or just buy tubby

Posted by Marty J - 2014/06/15 03:49

Sounds like you won't have much time to do things julio, so I think you should take the easy way out. Sell your n/a and by a turbo version.

=====

Re: mr2 mk2 conversion or just buy tubby

Posted by julio - 2014/06/15 13:06

Ya I think buying a tubby may be more straight forward, the thing is I'm trying to judge the market for selling my rev2 g-limited any one know what price rang to sell it at?

=====