Thanks Quandry.

Just to add that these items were to be used as a twin intercooler setup, but I have changed plans. They have never been used and were just sat in the garage.

Occasionally in Dublin.

I'm sure postage wouldn't cost much as it doesn't weigh a lot.

Hi marty do you need new pipes for the intercooler or can it use stock pipes?

I just measured the inlet/outlet and they are 60mm, so it looks like they take a larger pipe. This means it's less restrictive and air can be cooled better, which means more power can be made when you increase the boost pressure.

I should be going to Dublin city in three weeks time providing the weather isn't too bad.

If somebody wants to take a look at this or anything else I have posted in the for sale section, please let me know and I will bring it with me.

This intercooler is still available for €70.00.

I will be traveling to Our Lady's hospital in Dublin on 3rd of June. If anybody wants to take a look, let me know and I will take it with me.

Intercooler available for €70.00.

Good for when you are increasing boost for more power.

Boggles the mind that this is still for sale.

Have you advertised on IMOC, or even Dungdeal?

Hi mate does it need pipes or are they with it or does standarm ones fit

It's just the intercooler by itself.

I was going to buy some more pipes for the MR2 to have two intercoolers, but unfortunately finances dictate otherwise.

I'm just trying to get my MR2 back on the road. That's why this intercooler is for sale.

I suppose I could advertise it on donedeal.

Posting to other countries usually isn't so good as postage costs are higher, that's why I didn't bother with IMOC.

I would like to take it off you mate but id say its hard enough to get pipes for it

I have used pipes that were going to go back on the MR2. I can't see the rubber hoses, this MR2 has been apart for a few years now.

If you were willing to buy silicone hoses (which I could help you with) I might be persuaded to sell the pipes too.
